Big Foreign Work.

Big Foreign Work.

The program for the closing session Saturday evening will be featured by a general review of the Endeavor work in the Southern states and the world at large, by Mr. Lehmann, Southern states secretary. Mr. Lehmann has been engaged in the work for 15 years and is thoroughly familiar with the situation in all its details.

The expansion of the Christian Endeavor in France and Italy during the last year has been one of the big surprises of the war, says Mr. Lehmann. During the last six months the society has doubled its membership in Italy, and the society has tripled its work in France during the last year. This is undoubtedly due to the activities of the Endeavorers in the American army, who, when stationed in any locality for any length of time, inmediately begins organizing a society. One youth from Kannas organized nine societies in France. These societies may wane for leave, but the seed has been planted, and the churches of these countries have been quick to realize the value of enlisting their young people in church work. The societies have been wise in the control work. The societies have been wiped out. Germany's 600 societies have been wiped out. Germany's 600 societies have dwindled to about 50. In one society in Berlin every male member was killed in the war. Little progress is being made in Swweden or Holland. There has been no marked growth in Africa or South America hast year. Covering the entire world as it does, it is impossible to secretain definitely the membership of the Christian Endeavor, especially since the war, said Mr. Lehmann, but it is estimated that there are at least 4,000,000 members of the Christian Endeavon. 00 members of the Christian En

Many homes in the city are looking dirty and doil, said Mr. Harson Saturday, "and they need repainting. The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce has asked my countities to call the attention of the property owners to this condition, and encourage them to paint un."

The question of improvement of train schedules in and out of Memphis, in order to enable a larger number of shoppers to come into Memphis in the mornings and "et back home evenings, will also be discussed.

-and you will discover that it is a magic word with them. It stands for a land where things are all right, where there aren't a lot of foolish limitations as to what you may do. Imagine going around sprinkling the powder of life on hitching posts, saw horses, scarecrows or any old thing, and making good pals of them all. That's more like things ought to be. At any rate, all the wonderful Oz stories will start soon in The News Scimitar, and there will be some every week for a long time.

A Treat For the Youngsters to Appear in

"Thoughts for the Quiet Hour" REV. GEORGE W. KEMPER.

Sometimes you feel discouraged, But you don't know what about; While others folks are glad and gay, You're feeling down and out. No matter how well things may look, They don't appeal to you, For it's your heart that's hungry— When you're feeling sad and blue

Love is lacking in many a life, and there is nothing greater that we can do than to supply this lack. A great novelist relates of one of his characters, a nobleman, that when he walked over his estates he carried acorns in his pockets, and when he came to a spot which seemed bare he would plant one of them, that the dreary place might be bright-ened. So, if we carry always a heart full of love and good cheer, we may drop the living seeds into these sad and lonely places, thus changing desert spots into bits of lovely gardens.

In a heart-to-heart talk recently with a young business man, who has already given the best years of his life to the firm by which he is employed, he made this remarkable statement: "I have given these peole the best service I could possibly render, for the past 20 years; but, strange to say, I have never had a single word of encouragement from the proprietor in all these years." Twenty years of faithful service, and yet not a word of appreciation! Think of it! But that seems to be the way of the world these days, doesn't it?

But, should this young man die, almost the first thing done by this employer would be to tell his wife and children how highly he regarded him and what a great loss he had personally sustained in his death. In oken of this regard, a handsome design of beautiful flowers would be placed on his casket and grave, but—unknown to him: How much better were the kind words spoken and the flowers given him NOW, to give inspiration and hope and good cheer, in the stress and monotony of his present position.

Is it sheer thoughtlessness or selfishness, or a mixture of both which causes us to act this way toward our friends and loved ones? Sins of omission. May God forgive us of them. Two of the absolute essentials of a real Christian life are kindness and appreciation. There is littie, if any, Christianity in the life without them. Kindness is simply love at work in the common details of life. It is the very character of God. There is continual need of its manifestation in our life, and yet it is so often lacking.

Appreciation, when it really comes from the heart, is also of untold value, and lifts many a burden and lightens many a care. But appreciation doesn't mean flattery. No sensible person relishes that. But does us all good to know that our work and our words are really apreciated by those who are their beneficiaries. May God help us to rid urself of selfishness, and to show a deeper spirit of kindness and ap-McLemore Avenue Christian Church,
